ABOUT CRIE

The Centre for Research in International Education (CRIE) was established a decade ago, in order to provide a forum for discussion, conferences, research, publication, collaboration, etc in the field of international education. However, the field has changed in the intervening period, as international education has gained in importance as an export revenue-earner, a passport to employability, a stepping stone to migration, a challenge to conflicting curricula and pedagogies, etc.

SUBMISSIONS

We invite submissions of 150-200 word abstracts on topics including:

- The use of blogs, wikis, forums, e-portfolios, glossaries, gaming, YouTube and other videos, quizzes, apps, etc
- Using online resources for teaching and testing
- Turnitin
- Attitudes of international students to online resources
- Accessibility of international students to online resources

Suitable papers from the conference presentations will be invited to publish in the Online Journal of International Education (published by CRIE).
